The last speech of Mr. Clay was delivared before the Kentscky Legislature, in compliance with a joint, perhaps unanimous, request of its two Houses. That request was probably made in consequence of a reliable intimation that it would be acceptable to him. He seemed to desire an occasion for arousing the attention of the Representatives of Kent. Cky, and through them that of the nation to the grave subject of dismuon. How well he succeeded with his unimodiate andience, may be inferred from the fact stated by a member, that, whilst be apoke of the value and danger of the Union, tenrs of warm may be inferred to the eyes of many, and among them some of the most investrate old besurcerais in the source of the condition of the value and danger of the Union, tenrs of warm may then some of the most investrate old peacerais in the source of the condition of the condition of the proposition. Pending that content and in anti-patient of a then probable defeat, Governors, Senators, Representations, Ce, organized a conspirincy the avowed object of which was, in that event, to march upon Washington with an adequate unitary force, seize the government before the inanguration of tha new
